JUDGE SENDS FOUR YOUTHS TO MANSFIELD

Last Tobacco Sack Given To Jail Inmates

Sheriff and Judge to Abide By Ruling of County's Commissioners, Claim.

TOBACCO is off the county jail's "menu."

Following a statement by county commissioners a week ago that they will not sign any more bills for tobacco, either "chawing" or smoking, in the county jail, Sheriff Charles Radcliff has decided not to purchase any more "fuel" for the jail's inmates.

He had previously been providing prisoners with tobacco through one of the rules listed by the common pleas judge in rules of operation for the county jail. After a discussion with Judge Joseph W. Adkins an agreement was reached not to oppose the will of the commissioners in the matter.

USE PACK EACH DAY

When the jail is filled, Sheriff Radcliff pointed out, there are 14 persons on each floor One package of chewing tobacco and one bag of "roll-your own" smoking tobacco was being given each day to the prisoners.

A tobacco bill was approved Monday by the commissioners but this supply had been purchased previous to the seating of the new commissioners.

The commissioners assert they are of the opinion that persons go to the jail to pay for crimes and are not entitled to tobacco while "serving time."

FAIRFIELD-CO EXPENSE CUT

LANCASTER, Jan. 10.—Fairfield-co commissioners and Auditor Irvin Miller today had announced a saving of $102,000 for 1933 over last year. Salaries were slashed, appropriations for supplies and operating expenses were reduced to provide the saving.

The 1933 budget provides $423,000 for all purposes in the road, bridge and general funds with an appropriation of $525,000 for last year. The reduction in the road and bridge fund is $84,000 and there is a reduction of $18,000 in the general fund.

Salaries of deputies and clerks were reduced on practically the same basis as provided by the new law for elective officials which is 5, 10 and 12½ per cent on the first, second and third thousand, respectively, of annual salary.

CITY UNEMPLOYED AT WORK ON ROAD

A number of Circleville unemployed, receiving relief from the county, were working Tuesday on the Circleville-Walnut-twp line road under the supervision of Walnut-twp trustees

This is part of the plan of the county commissioners to have men getting relief work in return for it.

John W. Hay, president of the board, stated that the number at work is not near so large as it should be but that a large number will go on the roads as soon as an arrangement is made with Surveyor Howard Sweetman for the transportation of the workmen.

OHIO FARMERS OPPOSE SLASH

Governor Plans To Reduce Activities at Wooster By 50 Per Cent.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 10.—A storm of protest was swelling among agricultural leaders here today against the recommendation of Governor George White that activities and expenditures of the Wooster Agricultural Experiment Station be reduced approximately 50 per cent.

On virtually every hand, strong opposition was expressed to the proposal which would slash the six-months' appropriation budget for the station to $110,000.

L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau, indicated that plans are being made by the bureau's executive committee to draw up a vigorous letter of protest and forward it to the governor

The budget slash, it is charged, places the experiment station on a basis equal to that of 1918 or possibly earlier

Merle Brenneman, state budget commissioner, defended the appropriation as it stands.

"Great reductions in state expenditures were necessary," he said. "We selected activities not so essential to the public welfare."

Reynolds Widow Enters Pennsylvania Hospital

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10—Libby Holman Reynolds, former Broadway singer and widow of Smith Reynolds, heir to the tobacco millions found mysteriously slain last June at Winston Salem, N. C., was admitted to the new maternity ward of the Pennsylvania hospital today.

Although hospital officials maintained she was there "for observation only," it was understood the singer was awaiting the birth of her child. She was attended by Dr. Norris W. Vaux, prominent Philadelphia obstetrician.

Libby entered the hospital heavily veiled. She was accompanied by her mother.

Libby has already indicated the child will be named "Smith," whether it is a boy or a girl, in memory of her husband, for whose slaying she was once indicted together with Ab Walker, intimate friend of the tobacco heir.

'MORATORIUM' IN OHIO SEEN

COLUMBUS, Jan. 10.—Echoing the Iowa "moratorium war," Ohio Farm Bureau trustees met in special session here today to consider emergency methods of preventing foreclosures on Ohio farms.

Reduction of Ohio farm taxes was also considered at the meeting. More than 200 delegates from local branches of the bureau attended.

Ohio farmers face much the same problem as those in Iowa who have threatened violence unless a moratorium is declared on notes and mortgages according to Murray D. Lincoln, president of the federation.

Picturing the acuteness of the situation, Murray said that a $200 tax bill in 1926 could be paid with less than 150 bushel of wheat, although 400 bushels would be required today.

Lucius Wilson, of Chicago, an authority on stable money, and Gray Silver, former Washington representative of the bureau, will speak tomorrow before trustees and delegates.

OHIO STATE GRAD FATALLY INJURED

DAYTON, Jan. 10.—William Nesser, 23, of Columbus, a graduate of Ohio State University, was fatally injured, and Edwin Sittler, 24, of Keokuk, Ia., was seriously injured near here today when their automobile crashed into an abutment on the Dixie Highway.

Nesser and Sittler, who is a graduate of the University of Iowa, were returning to Dayton from Cincinnati where they had been purchasing some equipment for a "fever machine" they were installing at Miami Hospital. It was believed that Sittler, who was driving, fell asleep at the wheel of the car.

$45 IS NOT HUMAN BURIAL PRICE SAYS H. E. DEFFENBAUGH

H E. Deffenbaugh, Tarlton undertaker, denied Tuesday that he assailed the board of county commissioners Monday for cutting the burial price from $70 to $45 but declared he did say "it would be impossible to bury a person humanly for $45."

He said he asked Commissioner Burr H. Rader for an itemized bill of what they expected to be done for $45 but he was not given it but was told to "go ahead."

Mr. Deffenbaugh's visit to the board was for other business than "raising a rumpus" about the new price, he pointed out.

Williamsport School Head Presents Bill For Needy Children

DOG WARDEN 'OUT'

Economy Ax Still Cuts Its Swath

Continuing its activities which began last week, the county commissioners Monday, acted upon two important issues.

The board refused to approve a bill of $29.60 presented by Harold J. Bowers, superintendent of the Williamsport centralized school, for food for needy children of the institution.

Approval was refused on grounds that the bill was not a just one and that if the board approved one such bill every school in the county would have the same right to present grocery bills.

ALREADY HAD PROMISE

Mr. Bowers pointed out to the board that the previous board of commissioners including Mr. Hay, Marvin Dreisbach and Edgar Beatty had promised its approval but that the bill had not been presented in time. This assertion carried no weight with the new board.

The school man said that his board of education had no money and neither had the township trustees so he naturally turned to the commissioners. He declared that a large percentage of the school children under his jurisdiction are in dire need of assistance and must be fed.

Declaring the office "unnecessary" the commissioners abandoned the position of county dog warden held by J. W. Chalfin, Pickaway-twp. The edict, unanimously agreed upon, becomes effective at once.

Since the office was termed unneeded there will be no "dog catcher." The sheriff's office, according to the General Code of Ohio, cannot be named to fill the duties of the job.

The post at the time of abandonment paid $6 each day the warden was on duty. In 1932 Mr. Chalfin was paid $1194. He had held the position for four years.

As yet the 1933 budget had not been submitted to the commissioners by T. D. Krinn, deputy auditor, but Mr. Krinn is working on it and will possibly submit it at the next meeting of the board.

RED CROSS MEETS FRIDAY AT 7:30

ALSO ON 'SCHOOLS'

Would Return Auto to Personal List

Nathan Bohnert, Pickaway-co's Democratic representative in the General Assembly, had entered the limelight in the Ohio legislature Tuesday when announcement was made of his appointment as chairman of the Temperance committee.

This committee is considered one of the most important of the House and will consider prohibition repeal measures, several of which have already been presented.

MEMBERS LISTED

Bohnert is listed as a dry but his committee is reported to have liberal leanings. On it are Beatty, R., of Cincinnati; Harter, D., of Akron; Horton, D., of Noble-co; Kalb, D., of Port Clinton; McClusky, D., of Cleveland; McCrystal, D., of Sandusky; Reinhard, D., of Paulding-co; Cordes, R., of Cincinnati; Ford, R., of Warren; Gessaman, R., of Columbus; Hall, R., of Guernsey-co, and Slagle, R., of Youngstown.

All prohibition bills must pass through this committee's hands before reaching the floor of the House.

Mr. Bohnert was also appointed a member of the House committee on Schools which is headed by Representative Limes, Hardin-co Democrat. This committee is considered very important especially at this time and 18 members have been appointed on it.

WOULD RETURN AUTO

The Pickaway-co Representative is planning to make an attempt to have the automobile returned to the personal property tax list. Bohnert said he would offer a measure to fix the license fee at $1 on all motor cars and at the same time restore them to the personal property list. At present there is no personal property tax on automobiles, license fees having been increased two years ago to replace revenue formerly obtained from the personal property tax.

The Clearing House will handle records of all charitable organizations showing the names of families being aided, the nature of the assistance and all other details that are needed. The clearing house is primarily to prevent duplication and overlapping in relief work.

It is being financed by money transferred from the county's poor relief fund through authority of the State Relief commission

STATE BEGINS YANKEE CASE

20 Witnesses To Testify; Strange Stories Are Expected.

WEST UNION, Jan. 10.—Twenty state's witnesses, said to have strange stories to tell, were to be called today to climax the murder trial of Virgil Yankee, 24, who is accused of killing Mrs. Josie Hawes, mother of his sweetheart.

The first of several unusual revelations came to light yesterday when it was testified that Mrs. Hawes sold her cemetery lot for $4 on the morning of the day she disappeared.

A neighbor woman, Mrs Myrtle Irons, declared on the stand that Mrs. Hawes and her son, Carl, 19, visited her, and sold the lot without explanation.

Mrs. Hawes, whose body was found Thanksgiving day by two hunters who stopped at an abandoned well, had a $5 bill which she stated that "Bob" gave her, Mrs. Irons said.

"Bob" was thought to be Robert Ford, who was released by authorities after he was questioned about the killing He was an acquaintance of Mrs Hawes.

Carl Hawes, the son, related to the jury that he never saw his mother alive after they left Mrs Irons' home after the sale of the cemetery grave. His mother sent him home while she went into a nearby wood, he said.

Widow Tells Bizarre Life

Denies Ex-Deputy Sheriff Killed Young Bandmaster-Husband.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10. — Mrs. Frances Schildhauer's frank and detailed description of her bizarre home life admittedly brought police no nearer a solution today of the "ride" murder of her husband although she did disclose a secret tryst with another man on the afternoon of the murder.

After hours of questioning the young widow admitted that she had the rendezvous with Carl Bradberry, ex-deputy sheriff who is held in connection with the mysterious murder of Bandmaster Edwin O. Schildhauer. Bradberry has admitted that he and Mrs. Schildhauer had had intimacies.

To Police Captain John Stege's question as to whether Bradberry was the man she had seen kidnap her husband and take him away in the automobile in which he was murdered, the beautiful widow calmly replied, "No."

CHARGES ARE FIRED

Younger Durbin Begins Offensive Today

COLUMBUS, Jan. 10.—Charges that Charles F. Schaber of Bucyrus, was responsible for the loss of between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000 to Ohio investors while he was state commissioner of securities were hurled here today at a hearing conducted by the rules committee of the state senate to determine Schabers qualifications for membership on the Public utilities commission of Ohio.

The charges were made by Francis Durbin, son of W. W. Durbin, former Democratic state chairman, in an effort to block senate confirmation of Schaber's appointment to the utilities post.

Durbin, Lima attorney, and two Columbus newspaper editors, A. C. Johnson Sr., and Jacob Meckstroth, also were scheduled to testify at the hearing.

Warning against threatened high utility rates in the future, the Durbins and the Columbus newspapers have demanded that Governor George White withdraw his nomination of Schaber.

CROWD PRESENT

A large crowd jammed every nook and cranney of the senate chamber, where the hearing was conducted, as Durbin made his sensational charges against Schaber, who was nominated for the utilities post by Governor George White.

Certification of millions of dollars worth of securities by the Cleveland Discount Co., which Schaber oversaw were primarily responsible for the tremendous losses to Ohio investors, Durbin asserted.

"The poor and weak were victimized," he shouted at one point during the hearing.

"If Schaber's judgement on the state utilities commission proves to be no better than it was while he was state commissioner of securities," he declared, "the people of Ohio are in for an awful storming."

Durbin also asked that the committee call for questioning John Powers, the present state commissioner of securities, and produce the records of Schaber's tenure in office.

"These records," Durbin suggested, "will disclose the accuracy of my claims."

Durbin charged also that an effort was made by Schaber while the latter was commissioner of securities to obtain court approval of plans for the sale of Cleveland Discount Co., stock to widows and orphans in Ohio

After leaving the state securities division, Schaber was placed on the payroll of Joshiah Kelly, well-known Cleveland stock promotor, Durbin charged.

SCANS RECORD

Durbin also asked that an investigation be made into Schaber's record as a probate judge. He urged that State Auditor Joseph T. Tracy be requested to produce records of Schaber's tenure of office as probate judge.

Smith Bennett, Columbus attorney, took the floor following the close of Durbin's arguments and, on behalf of his client, made a blanket denial of the charges lodged against him.

BIG TEN'S GONFALON RACE IS WIDE OPEN

Fighting Boilermakers Fall Before Northwestern, Already Beaten.

The race for the Big Ten basketball championship apparently is a wide open affair with Purdue trailing before the onslaughts of an inspired Northwestern team, Michigan dropping before a versatile Illinois attack and Indiana reversing its form to beat Chicago, in Monday night games.

The upset of the Boilermakers on the Evanston, Ill., court was the surprise of the evening with Northwestern having been defeated last week by Illinois. A tight Northwestern defense put the 'bug' on Norm Cotton, stellar Purdue sophomore guard, and as a result the 'Cats' won. The score was 35-28 with Reiff, Brewer and Johnson, forwards, and center, scoring 32 of the Northwestern points. Kellar, Purdue's great forward, who becomes ineligible this week, was also stopped by the Wildcats.

Illinois held Michigan to a single field goal in the last half of their game at Champaign to win 22-17 after Michigan had led 15-11 at the half.

Bennett was hot for the Illinois team scoring 13 points while Eveland, Garner and Altenhof did all the Wolverines'. The Illinois team had shown strength in its two games and appears to be certain of recognition before the season is ended.

Chicago apparently is woefully weak with Indiana carrying off a 34-21 margin. The game was uninteresting, apparently, with the winners scoring their second field goal after 13 minutes of play and Chicago its first after 16 minutes.

Ohio State's team will be given a real test Saturday night when Minnesota's giants invade the coliseum court. Coach Olsen of Ohio is expected to use his same starting lineup of Colburn and Hinchman at forwards, Hosket at center and Capt. Mattison and Beitner at guards. The Ohio team has not lost a game since Hosket and Beitner became eligible at mid-year.

A Happy Royal Family

Here is an intimate photo of Princess Ileana of Rumania, with her husband, Archduke Anton of Austria, and their baby, whose title is Archduke Stephan. The baby is a nephew of King Carol of Rumania and the godson of former King Alfonso of Spain, so he may truly be said to have been born to the royal purple.

Widow Tells

searching for the weapon. Police have not been able to find the gun which killed Schildhauer.

She explained she met Bradberry in the county building where he was employed as a bailiff and they visited for a few moments.

Mrs. Schildhauer painted an entirely different picture of her murdered husband than that given by other witnesses, one in which he was described as a gay philanderer who led his young wife into immoralities so he might be free to carry on illicit love affairs of his own.

Until the widow told her story Schildhauer had been described as a serious-minded man whose chief interest in life was his music profession. He was employed as bandmaster at Austin high school.

Mrs. Schildhauer, dressed attractively in black, submitted to a questioning which lasted well into the night. Her mood was cheerful as she described incidents in her hectic married life.

But Captain Stege announced that he was unimpressed by her story, pointing out that she had spent most of the time blackening her husband's character.

"I am still convinced," he said, "that she is able to answer the question of who was in the automobile that took her husband away."

Mrs. Schildhauer will be questioned today by federal authorities regarding her trip to Memphis with Bradberry during which they lived as man and wife.

OHIO U. AND MIAMI MEET FRIDAY NIGHT

One of Hottest Fights in State Expected as Berens and Anthony Meet.

ATHENS, Jan. 10.—When Ohio University courtmen and the Miami Redskins meet here Friday night basketball fans of southern Ohio will witness what promises to be one of the most outstanding cage melees in these parts this season.

Coach "Butch" Grover and his Bobcat players are not bothered by superstition, though the contest occurs on Friday, the thirteenth. Despite the date, the Ohio cagers are determined to win the contest. The Bobcats have two basketball defeats last season and a 1932 football upset to avenge. A victory for Ohio will partly compensate for past defeats at the hands of Miami.

Since the Buckeye basketball inaugural for Marshall and Ohio University was postponed last Saturday night, the Miami fray will start the Grovermen in search of another conference crown. Miami suffered a disastrous defeat at the hands of Ohio Wesleyan in its initial league encounter. The Redskins and Ohio, however, boast of brilliant cage victories this season. The former upset the Indian Western conference quintet, while the Bobcats produced a spectacular defeat of Western Reserve at Cleveland.

Ohio's lineup for the Miami game is expected to remain intact with Reichley and Brown at the forward positions. Berens at center, and Saunders and Lackey at the guard posts. An interesting battle at the tip-off between Anthony of Miami and Ohio's lanky center, Berens, is expected. The latter is one of the high scorers of the state with 99 points to his credit.

England in 1829 giving glowing accounts of the success of the English railroads. He purchased a Stourbridge Lion locomotive for the Delaware and Hudson Co., and this arrived in May of that year. Allen placed it on the crude wooden track of the railroad which extended over the mountain to Carbondale, 17 miles distant. A few days later he ran the Lion, the first turning of an engine wheel on American soil.

The first locomotive of American manufacture was built at the West Point Foundry in New York City and was shipped to Charleston, S. C in 1830.

All over the country the railroad fever had taken hold with force and new lines sprung up all over the United States.

The Pennsylvania R R. claims it is the first and oldest railroad on the American continent. It was first to be constructed at the expense of the state.

The railroad reaches an arm in to an unknown country and it is known; great tracts of land that were untraversed became farms; hillsides yield up their mineral treasure, a busy town springs into life where there was no habitation of man a little time before and the town becomes a city. The railroad is life itself.

Mrs. Howard Jones as a wind-up gave an amusing description of the building of the little railroad between Circleville and Tarlton.

NEW CHICAGO 'CRIME KING'

Murray Humphries Named No. 1 Public Enemy in Place of Capone.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—A new crime king was officially crowned today by the Chicago police department

Ascending to the throne vacated when Al Capone was sent to the Atlanta federal penitentiary for income tax frauds is Murray Humphries, an outstanding example of the new style gangsters who are plaguing the city.

There was no coronation rig-a-marole, no blare of trumphets, to usher the new monarch into "office." He was merely listed as No. 1 on a revised list of "public enemies" compiled from Mayor A. J. Cermak "Scarface" formerly held the No. 1 position.

Humphries, detectives explained, is the leader of the syndicate which, having found smaller profits in booze, vice and gambling, turned to dominate legitimate business fields. A shrewd organizer and equipped with a college education of sorts, he has brought finesse and intelligence to racketeering, according to police.

Next to Humphries in the new "public enemy" list was placed the name of William "Three-Fingered Jack" White, who is an associate in crime, inc. Both Humphries and White are former Capone lieutenants.

Other high-ranking noodlums are Frank Nitti, "Machine Gun Jack" McGurn, and William "Klondike" O'Donnell McGurn was chief of the homicide detail in the old Capone gang, while Nitti, recently wounded by police, was the business manager.

Lanson Chamberlain, through his attorney Max Seyfert Jr., pleaded not guilty to three charges of blackmail in connection with the Francis 'Cappy' Hoover case. One indictment charges him with threatening to beat Hoover unless he gave him $500, another claims Chamberlain verbally threatened to accuse Hoover of sodomy in which he demanded $500 and the third says Chamberlain threatened Hoover with arms in an effort to extort $1,000.

Other not guilty pleas were entered by Chamberlain's son, Howard, charged with a statutory offense, Louis Green, alias Art Green, colored, of Parkersburg, Va., indicted on two counts of robbing the Frank Karshner home and the residence of Mrs. Harley Moss, and Clarence Easter for breaking and entering the home of Paul Stevens on the Island-rd.

Judge Adkins said attorneys would be appointed for indigent prisoners and that he, with the aid of Prosecuting Attorney Ray W. Davis, will set trial dates Wednesday morning.

Danes in Virgin Islands

The population of the Virgin islands is almost entirely negro now, but before the blacks were brought from Africa, to be slaves for their white masters, the islands were settled by Danes. The Danes brought deer from Denmark that they might hunt in the tropical woods, and the descendants of the deer still roam the mountains, so that hunting is a sport in the Virgins

INFANT IS STABBED

Six-Inch Stiletto Used to Kill Sleeping New York Child.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.— "One of the most inhuman crimes in years" today cried to police for solution.

Victim was 4-month-old Frank Michael Cammarano, stabbed to death with a black-handled, six-inch stiletto as he slept in his crib at the home of his grandparents

Striking with savage force, the murderer reached through an open window alongside the crib and drove the keen blade completely through the infant's body.

Apparently the slayer struck three times, two of the blows causing only slight scratches.

The murdered babe was discovered by his 16-year-old aunt, Teresa, when she tiptoed into the room to see if he was resting comfortably.

Inspector Henry Bruckmann, in command of Bronx police and detective, attributed the murder to revenge or jealously. He admitted however, there was nothing definite to support the theory

Long Life of Wood

Under suitable conditions wood will outlast iron and steel, as rust seems to be more destructive than rot or other forms of wood disintegration. It was only comparatively recently, after enduring for almost 1,000 years, that it was necessary to replace the wood beams of the roof of Westminster hall in London.

Interesting "Families"

The earth is filled with families. The most interesting, perhaps, to geologists is the carbon family. The diamond is essentially pure carbon and then comes graphite or plumbago, used for lead pencils and stove polish, then anthracite coal, then bituminous coal and finally lignite and turf or peat.

Batteries

We find since the new year came in that quite a number of car and truck owners have laid up their machines for an indefinite period, possibly without giving a thought to that magic little box under the seat or floor board. Your storage battery, the heart of the electric system dies by neglect but when properly treated it usually gives all that one would expect. Any battery in a normally discharged condition will freeze in cold weather, and therefore, in most cases you will be in the market for a new battery. On the other hand a battery which is inspected regularly, and the specific gravity reading from 1250 to 1300 you need not be alarmed for it required about 90% below zero to freeze a battery at 1300. Another harmful enemy appears when the battery is not in use and that is Sulphation. This causes the plates to harden and eventually be of no use.

Let us call for your battery TODAY and store it until you give us a ring.

Republicans Of Ohio May Use Pre-Convention Plan

COLUMBUS, Jan. 10.—Republicans of Ohio, determined to eliminate costly factional bitterness from the 1934 campaign, will consider plans for a pre-primary convention when the state executive holds a come-back meeting here Jan. 11.

Revolutionary in method, the proposal would reduce the May primary in the Republican party to a feeble gesture

It provides for endorsement of one candidate for each state office by the entire state organization several weeks in advance of the primary. All other aspirants, no matter how ambitious, would be expected to make a graceful withdrawal in the interests of party harmony.

If the convention would not happen to smile upon the candidacy of one of the leading office-seekers he would nevertheless be expected to give all his support to the organization in selecting the men chosen over him.

BAR 1932 SITUATION

Once adopted by the party, the pre-primary convention system would perhaps forever bar the entrance into the primaries of three such outstanding republican regulars as sought the gubernatorial nomination in 1932—David S. Ingalls, Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown and Former Governor Myers Y. Cooper.

One would be chosen as the organization candidate by a convention of delegates representing the entire state. The other two would submerge their ambitions for the time being.

The expense of the primary campaign, along with the wounds that often result, never to be healed, would all be banished, declare supporters of the plan.

State Chairman Ed. D. Schorr is one of the advocates of a preprimary convention. Fred W. Warner of Marion, one of the leading liberals in the executive committee, is also committed to the adoption of such an arrangement.

Many are the enemies that exist, however.

Nominating conventions were replaced with the primary in Ohio many years ago because it was too often charged that "bosses" controlled the selection of candidates. The primary, it was believed, would give the people an opportunity to choose candidates, independent of the "bosses." A pre-primary convention would again leave the leaders in charge, say the opponents.

The primary is pictured by the other side as a useless expense. The "bosses," their friends and their organizations are the only citizens who vote, and the people who were expected to save the situation show a colossal indifference, they say.

An effort to ban local and county committees from giving endorsements to individual candidates before the primary in another attempt to avert factional defection, is also expected to be made at the executive committee meeting.

Was Rockne Gang Bomb Victim?

In the plane wreck that snuffed out the life of Knute Rockne (left), famous coach, and seven others near Kansas City, almost two years ago, was it accident, or was cause by a time bomb intended to kill the Rev. John Reynolds (right), Notre Dame University priest, is the startling theory of Secret Service investigators who have been patiently probing the crash. The Rev. Reynolds was the witness to the slaying of Jake Lingle, Chicago newspaperman, who positively identified Leo Brothers as the slayer, and the attempt on his life was made by Brothers' gangster colleagues, according to the theory. The priest had reserved a place in the plane, but changed his mind at the last minute.

Reverting to Barter

FOR centuries money as a medium of exchange has been cited as one of the things which differentiates civilized countries from the uncivilized. Civilized man devised money as a substitute for primitive barter and primitive media of exchange.

America is going primitive. The depression has deprived millions of civilization's medium of exchange, compelling them to revert to simple barter and crude substitutes for money.

Barter exchanges numbering 140 are known to be operating in the United States. Others may have been overlooked during the enumeration. Through them the moneyless exchange labor for goods and goods for goods. Without benefit of these exchanges hundreds of thousands of men and women are exchanging what they have for what they need.

Chicago's municipal government has been using scrip for money in paying off its employes for two years and other governmental subdivisions have had to resort to this modern substitute for wampum.

There is nothing unsound, in economic principle, in the direct exchange of labor for goods, and the consequent exchange of one form of goods for another, which is simple barter. Scrip; however, is worthless without faith in the ability of the issuer to pay when the final reckoning comes. If accepted in lieu of money by anyone, it would be as good as money. Proud civilization must occasionally admit that its boasted institutions sometimes fail where the crude makeshifts of the barbarians serve the purpose well.

There may be depression here, but things are booming in China.

World's Hardest Job

WHEN former President Coolidge left the white house almost four years ago the nation talked hopefully of having his sage advise and unofficial services (made especially valuable by his long public service) for many years to come. In cutting those years to four dealt the nation a severe blow.

None can say with certainty that Calvin Coolidge shortened his life by serving his state and nation, but all can say that he would have gladly made this sacrifice for his country. Public life was his life.

Though he was not a big, vigorous man there was that old New England ruggedness about him which made him appear to stand up well under the relentless drive of high public office. The tremendous responsibilities and many disappointments of the presidency seemed never to faze him during those years in Washington but they must have worn out that strong heart.

America is not kind to her chief executives. Few long survive the stress and strain of four or eight years in the white house. Some have even died in office. There has been only one John Adams, that stout colonial who lived a quarter of a century after Jefferson succeeded him in the presidency.

MOVIES

AT THE GRAND

Most anyone in the world can visualize Janet Gaynor kissing Charles Farrell, but it takes a vivid imagination to picture her knocking him cold with a vase.

An accident, of course, yet it actually happens during the hilarious mixup of the dramatic climax in "The First Year," their latest Fox romantic comedy now playing at the Grand Theatre. However, the vase incident which makes Charlie a fit applicant for emergency treatment also occasions an excuse for Janet to gather him in her arms and to administer her curative kisses to the wound.

AT THE CLIFTONA

"Magic Night," latest starring vehicle of Jack Buchanan, will be seen on Wednesday at the Cliftona Theatre, and thus the international star will be seen upon the screen for the first time since "Monte Carlo," the Ernst Lubitsch effort.

This picture is the first of three which the comedian will make this year, and if this initial effort may be taken as a criterion Jack Buchanan's name is destined to be one of the greatest in the cinema. Moviegoers will remember Buchanan for his inimitable work in "Monte Carlo" and also in "Paris" with Irene Bordoni, and "The Show of Shows," of recent memory. But it is the stage lovers who will flock to see him, principally for their remembrance of him in the two "Charlot Revues," "Battling Butler" and the recent "Wake Up and Dream."

New Cinema Queen

"Magic Night" will introduce to Americans England's new reigning cinema queen—Anna Neagle. This young woman has hit genuine heights in Europe, and her charm is confidently expected to make her captivation of movie audiences world-wide when "Magic Night" is released throughout America.

Incidentally, Anna Neagle has appeared upon Broadway, although few theatre-goers will remember her. This fact is mentioned because of the romance of her ascension to fame. Miss Neagle was a member of the chorus of "Wake Up and Dream" when that stage production played at the London Hippodrome, and when C. B. Cochran sent the show to New York she was chosen as one of the twenty representative English beauties to go along.

A GREAT FOOTBALL ROMANCE

SYNOPSIS

Ted Wynne aspires to the higher things in life so he leaves his position in a steel mill and works his way through Old Dominion College. He succeeds creditably. Under Coach Barney Mack, Ted becomes quarterback on the Blue Comets, losing only one game during the season. His only enemy at school is Tom Stone, who considers Ted his inferior. Both boys are rivals for the love of wealthy and spoiled Barb Roth. Following a misunderstanding, Ted ignores Barb, but his thoughts are always of her even while with lovely Rosalie Downs. At the Christmas dance, Barb slights Ted. Rosalie tries to make him understand he has his ideals centered around the wrong girl. Later in the evening, Ted, for the first time, realizes how lovely Rosalie is. Days of happy companionship follow. Barb is puzzled. Back at school, Ted's thoughts return to Barb. Then he meets Betsy. They are exceptionally fond of one another, but realizing he is not in a position to be serious, Ted discontinues seeing her. In the spring, Barney lectures on football.

CHAPTER XXII

"Hello, Shakespeare."

Big Pat called across the campus lawns. Ted sealed his ears with his finger tips and kept moving toward his room. Others passing him smiled.

"Boy—you're a sensation," Pidge marveled, as Ted threw his book on the table and pounced on the bed for a stretch.

"Lay off."

"No kiddin'—Red Mike read 'Man of Steel' in class to the juniors this morning and I hear the Scribblers are going to have you speak to them."

"Lay off, Pidge, you've got to be on the level about this."

"Straight dope—you're a cognescenti or some kind of a cog around here now—you have entered the intellectual life of the community."

"You've got to promise to put me wise if they're goofing me."

Goofing was a deadly remedy which New Dominion used to deflate enlarged craniums and discipline freshmen, sophomores, juniors or seniors who, for any reason at all, were convinced that they had become good at anything at all.

The goofee was flattered, fawned upon; became immensely popular and was encouraged to talk about himself informally, publicly; to explain his success at developing his figure or playing quarterback—then, when he had achieved the maximum inflation, the bubble was punctured and the goof was either ruined or cured.

Ted had written his sonnet, labored with it, put something of his own philosophy and that of the steel mill into it. Later he recognized it as his reaction to the attack which life was making upon his emotional equation at the moment. It had come in the form of a sonnet—he knew nothing of the machinery of sonnets or their adaptability—as a sonnet it was written. Dr. Miltner had said it was a "daring" idea for the sonnet form and Ted didn't know what he meant.

It had been printed in the school literary weekly. Professors and serious students had been stopping him, congratulating him, always expressing surprise that a football man could write such a gem. The news had evidently reached the gym, which gave little heed to sonnets; and Ted knew that Pat's salutation was the opening gun of a goofing salute.

The roar followed shortly. The door opened and a flock of young men in blue sweaters with gold monograms surrounded him, congratulating him effusively. Big Pat, in a voice heavily laden with inherited brogue, announced that the Young Men's Shakespeare Club would now come to order; the meeting would be addressed by Brother Brute.

Brother Brute conversed in a flowery falsetto upon the merits of "Man of Steel," the most recent literary contribution from Brother Wynne. Brother Wynne was then requested to read his sonnet. They lifted him to a table, cheering shrilly.

"Modesty forbids me to read my own stuff," he declared. "I only want to say that I owe everything to my roommate who is my ghost-writer."

It warmed Ted to have the boys goof him a bit; he felt less the lone wolf, less the field general, more akin to the mob.

Authority had always gravitated to him; his authority was usually respected; he was recognized as a man of thought, one layer ahead of the mob mentally—but seldom chosen to rule.

Pat was a natural leader: down among the mob and standing out, always one step ahead of them in action and not concerned with whether he was being followed—and they trusted him.

Pidge was of the flowing wine of humanity itself; giving rather than taking; elbowing nobody aside; interfering with nobody's ambition. The mob loved him.

Stone was the tyrant, neither loved, respected nor trusted, who ruled, when possible, by force, chicanery or deceit.

Ted, destined to higher things than any of them, found something in all of them to envy.

Spike Parker sent "Man of Steel" to the Tribune as a short feature story and received a request for a longer article on Ted's experience in the mill.

"It's the bunk, of course," Spike said, "but it's bunk like this that makes all-Americans."

The story went out; and cartoons of Ted Wynne, Football's Man of Steel, filled much space in the newspapers during the off-season.

The Iron Age reprinted the poem and it eventually found its way to the bulletin boards of the Riverside Plant.

"Smart boy you have," the men told Ted's father, "and a good man in the mill, too."

The elder Wynne took credit for it all. Long ago he had become an expert on football; a man to whom superintendents stopped and talked, seeking kernels of inside stuff.

Ted was amused and pleased with his dad's new attitude. It smoothed things at home, and it gave his parents a compelling new interest in a life barren of such. It gave them a reflected glory which he knew they loved. His mother, during football season at least, now enjoyed preeminence in the backfence confabs the neighbor ladies held every morning.

The university slept in mountainous quiet. Frogs croaked, crickets chirped, animals complained near the farm house as a motor disturbed them; three sombre sentinels—the dome, chapel spire and a tall brick stack—leaned against a sky from which stars hung low and clear.

Ted Wynne, a lonely shadow moving along the road, looked to the stars and smiled. He thought that if the stars had a sense of humor they must smile, also, at the Lilliputian stumbling along in the gloom, stubbing his toes on the stones beneath while searching the unattainable for the intangibles, thinking of his todays, yesterdays and tomorrows.

He wondered desperately what it is all about.

But others had looked at the stars and found answers. Perhaps the big blinkers were anxious to tell what they knew—if the gazer kept his mind off the ground long enough to comprehend, if he looked less in women's eyes those brighter, more enticing lights that lie—because they cannot trust the men who look, perhaps?

Ted turned in from the road towards Byrne Hall. It was after twelve and the doors would be locked—if the night watchman let him in there would be complications with the Prefect of Discipline in the morning—missing the last car was no excuse—Pepper was tough.

He stepped behind a tree to let two men go by, believing them to be watchmen. He recognized the Brute and Jack Boomer and called to them.

"How're you getting in?"

"What the hell are you doing out?" the Brute whispered. "Pat's window's working."

Pat lived in the basement floor known as the subway, domicile of "kept" athletes and wealthy hero worshippers. The window, level with the ground outside, was protected by a screen which was fastened inside. The Brute reached through a hole in the screen, unhooked the latch, swung back the screen, opened the window and eased his bulk through as cautiously as a cat. Boomer followed, then Ted.

A chair had been thoughtfully placed beneath the window by Pat so that the night hawks might not disturb his honest slumber. He snored calmly as they crept by, opened the door and stepped into the darkened hall where one weak bulb burned, moving softly so as not to disturb the prefects.

It was the system. When Pat's window was detected and repaired, another one would be open and the word would go round among the regulars—so went the ancient and honorable custom of "skiving" which operated thusly since before Barney Mack had been a student.

Ted stole through the corridors, up the creaking steps, and arrived safely in his own room. He was exhilarated with the success of his first skive, felt more human, more in touch with the regulars.

Bucking the law had a tasty lure.

Conditions in the Valley were poor that summer. The mill was shut down; the coal mines were on strike; unemployed from these major industries took what few jobs might have been available on the railroads or glass factories. There was no work to be had.

"Never mind," his dad had said, "take it easy. You'll have a tough season this year."

Ted had forgotten how to take it easy. He had always been pushing ahead. Now there was nothing to push.

FOR SEVERE COLDS

Whooping Cough Is A Dangerous Infection

Too Many Parents Make the Mistake of Considering This Ailment in the Light of a "Necessary" Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

TOO MANY mothers look upon whooping cough as a minor and harmless disease. This is a (alse notion. Whooping cough is really a serious disease and must never be considered otherwise. It is one of the dangerous infections of early childhood and is particularly serious when it attacks children under five years of age.

Dr. Copeland

The disease is caused by germs which are spread by coughing and sneezing. They find lodgement in the lining of the throat and windpipe where they set up inflammation.

The mucous which pours out from the congested glands, interferes with normal breathing and causes marked spasms of coughing. In severe cases the coughing is violent and the breathing becomes almost impossible.

May I warn you against the danger of deliberately exposing a child to whooping cough? A child afflicted with this disease should not be permitted to play with other children. Often the disease is overlooked, or is mistaken for a simple cold or couch. A child with a cold who is sneezing or coughing should be kept away from other children.

Symptoms of Whooping Cough

Persistent coughing is an early sign of whooping cough. The possibility of the disease should always be suspected in a child who has the early symptoms of a bad cold. If, in the second week of illness, the cough becomes more severe and the child vomits after severe spells of coughing, it is very likely to be whooping cough.

The disease may last from six weeks to three months. It is so wearing that the best of care and attention are necessary. If, during this long period, the disease is neglected the child becomes weak, loses weight and becomes susceptible to other diseases, such as pneumonia and influenza. Bear in mind that the danger of whooping cough is not the infection itself, but the coughing and weakness caused by repeated spells of coughing.

The attacks can be lessened by the use of an old-fashioned croup kettle or inhalations of certain soothing substances. Burning a eucalyptus cone or dropping compound tincture of benzoin on steaming hot water alongside of the baby's crib is beneficial.

The child's diet must be carefully watched. The child should be fed after his vomiting attacks so that nutrition is not lost. Serve small but frequent meals. Avoid dry and irritating foods, as crackers and cake. Cleanse the mouth frequently with bicarbonate of soda solution. This will help loosen up the mucous plugs and prevent gagging.

I cannot over-emphasize or too often repeat the necessity of considering whooping cough as a serious ailment. In all cases, it is advisable that the afflicted child be under the personal supervision of a physician. Keep your child away from a child with whooping cough and in turn, if your child has this disease, do not allow him to play with other children.

Answers to Health Queries

Yours Truly, Q. What should a boy of 15, 5 feet 6 inch tall weigh? 2. How can I gain weight?

A.—He should weigh about 132 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance. 2. Eat plenty of good nourishing food. Exercise daily in the open air, practice deep breathing. Get regular hours of sleep and avoid poor elimination. Take cod liver oil as a general tonic.

Waterways And Highways Discussed At Monday Club

The Monday Club met in regular session Monday evening with the president, Mrs. Clark Will, reading an appropriate verse from the Buckeye magazine as an opening selection.

Mrs. Arthur C. Wilkes for years an active member of the club, but for a few years unable to attend because of failing health, was unanimously elected an honorary member.

Mrs. G. G. Leist, chairman of the program committee for next year, announced the following four subjects for the year's work, Music, Drama, Architecture and Psychology.

Mrs. Evan Reichelderfer announced that she would have articles from the Blind Department on hand for distribution at the next meeting.

The president at this point turned the meeting over to Miss Clara Littleton, chairman of the section on Romance of Waterways and Highways.

"OLD AS SOCIETY"

Miss Jeannette Reichelderfer read an interesting paper on the subject of "Old Tow Paths and The Erie Canal." In part she related that artificial waterways are almost as old as human society. We learn of a canal system created as far back as 7000 B. C. Later came the canals of the Chinese and Romans. Originally, no doubt, men made waterways to help irrigate the land, but their value as a means of transportation was seen and used long before the Christian Era.

Inland America at the birth of the Republic, was a great mystery to the average dweller on the Atlantic seaboard. The reports of those who had penetrated the interior were contradictory, however, they all agreed to the richness of the inland realm, but for various reasons it seemed that inward development was impossible.

George Washington caught the vision of a republic stretching toward the setting sun and by personal explorations drew an accurate picture of the future trade routes by which the country could be nationally united. The spirit for the development of domestic commerce in the states did not manifest itself until after the second war of Independence.

The American canals were of three types; short ones which replaced portage paths around rapids or falls in the streams; ones that connected exisiting waterways in the same locality; ones to connect bodies of water in different localities.

During the early part of the nineteenth century, the American people became engaged in three great transportation projects for the national development of the United States. One of these was the building of the Erie Canal—connecting Lake Erie and the Hudson River. A group of energetic New Yorkers convinced the state legislature of the great value to the state and on July 4, 1817 three days after the foremost promoter DeWitt Clinton, became governor of the state, the work was begun. There was a great celebration in New York when the canal was completed. The first barage was called "Seneca" and Governor Clinton who was on board for the maiden trip, poured two kegs of Lake Erie water into the ocean at New York City, as a symbol of joining the Great Lakes with the Atlantic.

"PREMIUM ON SPEED"

During the industrial development of the latter half of the nineteenth century premium was put on speed. The old, slow canal routes gave way to speed, but the historic Erie still plays some part in the transportation system of the United States as it has been enlarged by the state to a barage canal capable of floating boats of a thousand tons.

The next, a prepared paper, was written by Mrs. Charles Gerhardt, who was unable to be present because of illness, but was read by Mrs. Anna Chandler. The subject was "The Beginning of the Railroad Era."

When the Revolution was completed and the United States firmly established as a nation, the people began to give earnest attention to internal improvement and development. The country began vaguely to realize its vast inherent wealth, but how to develop that wealth was a problem and it became evident from the first that it must depend almost wholly on transportation facilities. Farsighted men saw clearly that the canal was not the real solution of the transportation problem. Distinct rumors from across the sea told of a new method in England—the railroad. A canal engineer named Horatio Allen was sent to England to investigate .

FIRST PROJECTS CRUDE

In the meantime, other railroad projects were also under way in this county-short and crude affairs. In 1807, Silas Whitney built a short line on Beacon Hill, Boston, which is accredited as being the first American railroad.

A number of short lines were built in different parts of the country but the only one that seems to have attained a lasting distinction was built by Gridley Bryant in 1826 to carry granite for the Bunker Hill monument from the quarries at Quincy, Mass., to the docks four miles away.

The motive power of all these railroads was the horse which had not the staying or hauling powers to make him a real factor in the railroad line.

Horatio Allen returned from

NEWS OF HOMES AND HOME FOLKS

VOL. 4. NO. 2. Published by STEVENSON'S Tuesday, January 10, 1933

On the first business day of 1933, the proprietor of a local store called H. G. and asked him to drop in. When H. G. called at the store he was informed that the folks in the store had been quite ill due, we were told, to insufficient heat. After talking over the situation, it was decided that an Estate Heatrola should be installed. The prop. of this store stated that he felt that he should buy the best and that if the time should ever come when he wanted to sell it, he would have no trouble in finding a buyer. And now, with the proper firing of the Heatrola, this store should be warm as toast. Even the floor at the base of the heater is nice and warm.

* * *

And speaking of the Estate Heatrola, we're just real proud of our Heatrola sales for the year just passed. New installations exceeded those of 1931 by 78.6 per cent. (How we wish that we could say as much for all departments of this store!) Well, we believe that was a nice increase due, we believe, to the fact that folks are learning that there is only ONE Heatrola and that it is sold right here. They've learned too, that the Estate is the heater to buy if they want to be sure to have a warm floor near the base of the heater. And then, too, the prices have been greatly reduced. By the way, why not have one installed right now, before another cold snap sneaks up on us? We'll make you a proposition if you are interested.

* * *

A Mr. Jones and his wife, from Waverly, dropped into the store last week and inquired about Pyrofax gas for those living beyond gas mains. There's an agent for Pyrofax in their city, but they wanted to see what make of ranges we sold with our Pyrofax. They had been sold on the idea by their local dealer. Well, if they could but talk with our users, they'd be sold and sold to stay. And why not? The cost of installing a gas range in a country home—any country home—is not excessive and the cost of operation is very reasonable. Ask us.

* * *

He boldly asked her father for his daughter's hand.

"Certainly, my boy," replied Pa. "Take the one that is always in my pocket."

* * *

A family out on East Main had a De Luxe bed-spring delivered to their home Saturday morning. Unless we miss our guess, Mr. F— will be arising later from this time on than he usually arises. And now if they'd let us put a SLUMBERON inner-spring mattress on that spring, they'd have a bed "what am a bed."

* * *

A home north of Hargus creek is well supplied with Estate products. An Estate Heatrola has been in the home for some weeks, but last week one of the Estate fresh-air oven ranges—yes, it has insulation around the oven and a heat regulator, too—and is finished inside and out with porcelain. The outside is a beautiful ivory. Just wait until that family gets familiar with the range and watch them boost.

* * *

With spring house cleaning just around the corner, it might be well to be thinking of new floor coverings. We're prepared to furnish you with rugs—any size as well as carpeting. Give us a look.

"Chesterfields taste Better"

WE HAVE been telling the public for a good many years that Chesterfields taste better. They satisfy!

That wouldn't mean a thing if smokers found out that it wasn't so. Nobody can fool the people very long.

But a great many smokers have smoked Chesterfields for a long time, and they know that they taste right. And so they say to their friends, "If you want a cigarette that really tastes better, try Chesterfields!"

Chesterfields taste better because they are made of mild tobaccos that have been aged for two years. And there is just enough Turkish in them ... but not too much.

We are sure that you, too, will enjoy their Mildness and Better Taste.
